A NOTE FROM CO-DIRECTOR JEANNIE LeGREW

I believe I was 12 when my school librarian, Ms. Frazier, first handed me The Color of Magic. Already being a fan of Lord of the Rings and Monty Python, I was thrilled because the book series seemed like a combination of the two. I revisited the books again as a young adult when a friend recommended Equal Rites and again when I found that Wyrd Sisters had been adapted for the stage just last year. It never ceases to amaze me how Sir Pratchett's work seems to 'hit different' with each new phase of my life.

When I first brought the idea to the Board I wasn't sure how much they knew about the Discworld series, but I knew that the incredible talent here in Wolfeboro was just the right group to bring you this silly adventure. Luckily we have a Board well-versed not only in literature but potential.

I want to say thank you first to my co-director, Paul Stewart. I know this isn't how you planned to spend your summer but, boy, am I grateful for you. Thank you for your faith in me, this project and your incredible ability to instill confidence in me. I would be remiss if I didn't thank Stef Marsh, the world's most talented, and patient, costumer. Also, a big shout out to Russ Ellis and his incredible team of set builders. Not to mention our producer, Phoebe, and this incredible cast. Only a group this talented could bring Discworld to life here in Wolfeboro. Last but not least I'd like to thank my wonderful family. Without your love and support I would achieve nothing and... you would get more sleep. Jokes aside, you are and always will be the greatest part of my life.

So welcome, dear patrons to the Disc, where the demons are bureaucrats, the guilds are honorable (ish), the best librarian is an orangutan, and the witches don't meddle.... mostly.

SETTING

The play is set in the small country of Lancre amongst the typical blasted heaths, dank dungeons, royal castles, quaint cottages, roving theaters, and romance-inspiring woods. Three witches contend with treacherous royals, confused guards, a roaming theatrical troupe, and a wise fool as they seek to protect the infant son of King Verence.

Act I: Throughout the Kingdom over three years.

Act II: Same Kingdom - 15 years later.
